

STRETCH RECONCILIATION ACTION PLAN

January 2025 – December 2027

Acknowledgment of Country

We acknowledge the Traditional Custodians of the Country on which Intrepid's Melbourne (Narm) headquarters is located, the Wurundjeri and Bunurong people of the Kulin Nation, and acknowledge the Traditional Custodians of Country in all areas that we operate on. We recognise their continuing connection to the land, waters and culture. We pay our respects to their Elders past and present.

Wherever we travel, we're on First People's land. We recognise the unique place held by First Nations People as the original custodians of the lands and waterways across the globe and support the continuation of cultural, spiritual and educational practices.

A message from the CEO of Reconciliation Australia

On behalf of Reconciliation Australia, I congratulate Intrepid on its formal commitment to reconciliation, as it implements its first Stretch Reconciliation Action Plan (RAP).

Formed around the pillars of relationships, respect and opportunities, the RAP program helps organisations realise the critical role they can play in driving reconciliation across their work and area of expertise. As a key member and driving force behind the development of the Tourism Reconciliation Industry Networking Group as well as a B Corp certified organisation, Intrepid has many opportunities to both share and protect the cultures of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples with travellers of the world.

The commitments in this Stretch RAP are built upon the considerable experience and reflection Intrepid garnered in its previous RAPs. Since its first RAP in 2019, Intrepid has steadily increased the number of experiences offered by Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander owned providers, bringing experiences to over 5,000 travellers. Additionally, it engaged with First Nations content creators to inspire travellers to discover more about the world's oldest continuous culture. Not only is it clear that Intrepid understands its responsibility, as a travel provider, to respect and preserve Country and First Nations cultures, it does so by taking the lead of Aboriginal and Torres strait Islander peoples.

With this solid foundation, Intrepid enters its new RAP eager to continue building its First Nations led experiences but also to grow its impact through concerted truth-telling activities and embedding diverse perspectives in its decision-making processes. Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples' opinions and experiences are as diverse as their lands, languages and cultures. Understanding this, Intrepid commits to ensure increased diversity of voices from Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities through its decision-making processes. Intrepid also seeks to leverage its unique opportunities to help share the truth of Australia's history to its customers through First Nations led storytelling. In doing so it embraces truth-telling as an essential driver of reconciliation.

Intrepid has the potential to drive considerable reconciliation outcomes across its sphere of influence. On behalf of Reconciliation Australia, I commend Intrepid on this Stretch RAP and look forward to following its ongoing reconciliation journey.

About the artist

Kuku Yalanji woman Sheryl Burchill is an artist born in Mossman and raised in both the Julay (Daintree River) and Mossman areas north of Gimuy (Cairns).

She comes from an artistic family and says the stories her mother and grandparents passed down have inspired much of her work. Her connection to her art has evolved over the years; at one time, it offered a creative outlet and at another, it brought her healing. Today, she says, her art provides an opportunity to share the stories of her Elders and help keep her Culture alive.

Her mediums include screen printing, batik, lino printing, textile printing and etching and she believes that sharing everything she's learnt about her Culture through her art is a blessing. She wants to see an Australia where First Nations Culture and connection to Country are widely celebrated and she's excited about how Intrepid is helping to do that.

Sheryl has a spiritual connection to the Land where Intrepid's Daintree Ecolodge sits. She and her family have shared their Cultural knowledge with the Intrepid team and are helping protect the Culturally Significant Sites on the property. Alongside her artwork in this document, her work is showcased throughout the Ecolodge. Sheryl says, 'I really believe I'm guided towards everyone I'm meant to meet and connect with and I feel deeply aligned with Intrepid's mission and commitment to reconciliation.'

About the art

Ever-inspired by her Elders, Sheryl's depiction of the Wurarr-wurarr (dragonfly) in her art was first influenced by her mother, who taught her they are 'wind-tellers' that indicate change and winds coming.

This artwork represents Intrepid's commitment to change, the evolution of our business (including the addition of the Daintree Ecolodge, our first hotel acquisition globally) and our dedication to growing with purpose. The colours reflect Sheryl's connection to Country; the blues depict the Great Barrier Reef and the deep brown and greens represent the Daintree Rainforest.

This artwork embodies Traditional Ritual knowledge of the Kuku Yalanji community (the Community). It was created with the consent of the custodians of the Community.

Dealing with any part of this artwork for any purpose that has not been authorised by the custodians is a serious breach of the Customary Lores of the Community. For enquiries regarding permitted uses of this artwork, contact the Artist, Sheryl J Burchill.

Our vision for reconciliation

Our vision for reconciliation is a society where Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people and non-Indigenous people work in genuine partnership – listening and learning from each other to create equal opportunity. The practice of reconciliation addresses the inequality in the present and acknowledges and learns from the wrongdoings of the past to rectify injustices and assist healing. Reconciliation means that non-Indigenous Australians recognise the unique connection that Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people and communities have to the land, waters and sky, acknowledging that the care for Country that they have provided for thousands of years has made our lives richer.

We will support reconciliation by:

- Educating staff and providing them with opportunities to connect with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people through cultural training, on-country experiences, National Reconciliation Week and NAIDOC celebrations, and volunteer opportunities;
- Increasing employment opportunities within our business through broader recruitment practices, internship and scholarship opportunities;
- Elevating the voices of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people by engaging content creators to tell their own stories through Intrepid channels and seeking advice and input from Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islanders experts, advisors and staff in decisions related to reconciliation actions.
- Connecting customers with First Nations culture by incorporating First Nations experiences on our trips, increasing the number of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander tour leaders and sharing current and historical information during our trips;
- Backing First Nations-owned and run businesses through our trips and mentoring programmes, increasing procurement from First Nations businesses and providing financial support through the Intrepid Foundation;
- Committing to finding a pathway to truth-telling in internal and corporate communications as well as during our trips;
- Connecting industry partners to support and accelerate reconciliation actions and programs and sharing knowledge and experiences;

The vision for reconciliation reflects Intrepid's shared mission – to create positive change through the joy of travel. We exist to inspire, create, share and lead the best travel experiences. First Nations partners and experiences help us realise this purpose. We acknowledge and thank the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people who share their knowledge, community and Country with Intrepid staff and customers.

Message from the CEO

I am proud to present Intrepid Travel's Stretch Reconciliation Action Plan (RAP), which reflects our ambitious and sincere commitment to reconciliation. As an Australian founded and headquartered business, we recognise that reconciliation is vital to building a stronger and more equal country.

Intrepid launched our Reflect RAP in 2019, followed by our Innovate RAP in 2020. Since then, much of our focus has been on growing the number of unique and authentic experiences that are delivered by First Nations tourism operators on our itineraries. As a travel business, we believe this is the most powerful way to embed reconciliation into our business and share it with our customers.

Now, as we move ahead with our Stretch RAP, we recognise we must be more ambitious and grow in new ways – many of which may challenge us. In particular, we know that employment and economic empowerment are critical pillars in the reconciliation journey. For these reasons, we're committed to prioritising First Nations employment in our business. This is a central action of this RAP.

Beyond employment, this Stretch RAP focuses on building strong partnerships and supporting greater truth-telling in our business – recognising that Australia cannot move forward without addressing its past.

The five years of our RAP journey has been a period of great cultural, social and economic change in Australia, as well as globally. For our business, we've experienced the darkest of times and the brightest of recoveries. Socially, the world has shifted and changed – but sadly, in Australia, the gap between Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples and non-Indigenous Australians has stubbornly remained – and in some cases, grown larger. That is why we view this Stretch RAP as such an important vehicle to support positive change in economic participation and development of people and their communities.

This work will stretch and challenge us, but we know that Intrepid's commitment will not falter.

I would like to extend thanks to our Intrepid team, Reconciliation Australia, and our community partners and advisors who have helped us on our reconciliation journey so far. We look forward to the next phase and working in partnership together.

James Thornton
CEO, Intrepid Travel

Our business

Intrepid was founded in 1989 by two friends from Melbourne who dreamed of creating a style of travel that could benefit both travellers, and the people and places they visit. From that adventurous beginning, Intrepid is now the world's largest provider of sustainable experience-rich travel, with hundreds of trips in more than 100 countries.

As a certified B Corp, we balance purpose and profit and aim to ensure our business benefits all. We're determined to grow with purpose on our path towards delivering on our ambitious 2030 goals, which includes an aim to direct 1% of our revenue to purpose actions.

Intrepid is more than just a tour operator that designs, sells and operates trips. In 2025, we have 31 country offices across the world, which are the operational hubs that run Intrepid tours in each of our markets. This gives Intrepid the ability to engage locally, employing local people, applying local expertise and impacting on local communities.

Since our last RAP, we have built our operational capacity in Australia, through the purchase and integration of Jump Out of Bed Travel as our operating company in Australia. We have also invested in a hotel, purchasing Daintree Ecolodge, which sits on the land of the Eastern Kuku Yalanji Aboriginal People.

In 2024, we employed approximately 3,000 team members worldwide, with 180 based in our head office in Narrm/Melbourne and 300 based around Australia. Our head office is located on the land of the Wurundjeri people of the Kulin Nation, and we acknowledge their continuous connection to Country. While our organisation has previously employed First Nations staff, we currently have no team members who identify as Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander people. This strategy prioritises employment and retention to create meaningful pathways into fulfilling opportunities.

Balancing purpose and profit

Our long-term commitment to responsible travel sets us apart and we work hard to set a positive example in our industry. We advocate on a range of important issues, from human rights to biodiversity and environmental conservation, all of which are tightly connected to reconciliation. In 2022, we expanded our Purpose team to provide speciality pillars for our work in environmental impact, responsible procurement and social impact, under which our Reconciliation Action Plans sit.

We recognise collective impact provides a bolder voice to make change and work with a range of global partners to develop and support initiatives aimed at helping people and places thrive. We're a signatory to the United Nations Global Compact (UNGC), the world's largest corporate sustainability initiative. We are actively working to decarbonise our business, and we are committed to protecting the rights of women, children, and other marginalised groups, as well as supporting animal welfare. We're dedicated not only to operating our global business in a responsible manner, but also to transparency and continuous improvement.

Locally, we have been mobilising the tourism industry to share their individual reconciliation journeys and support each other. In 2022, Intrepid and Tourism Australia led the creation of the Tourism Reconciliation Industry Networking Group (Tourism RING), inviting all tourism businesses with a RAP to collectively address issues and share learnings and resources. There are now more than 20 organisations that are members of the RING. We also connected with B Lab (the organisation that oversees B Corporation certification) to create a B Corp Reconciliation Action Group in 2022. Over the past two years this group has been running, 15 B Corps have joined the B Corp Reconciliation Action Group. In addition to our own support for the referendum to enshrine a Voice to Parliament in 2023, we presented at and funded industry workshops for both these networking groups to garner industry-wide support for Yes23.

The Intrepid Foundation

Our not-for-profit, The Intrepid Foundation, was established in 2002 to enable travellers to give back to the places and people they visit.

The purpose of the Foundation is simple: to empower travellers to make a difference by supporting locally-led, grassroots organisations working towards positive change in their communities. In 2024, in Australia, we partnered with Country Needs People, a not-for-profit organisation that actively advocates to expand the number and size of Indigenous Protected Areas, increase the number of rangers that protect these areas and support those rangers. They're aligned with more than 40 Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander land and sea management organisations.

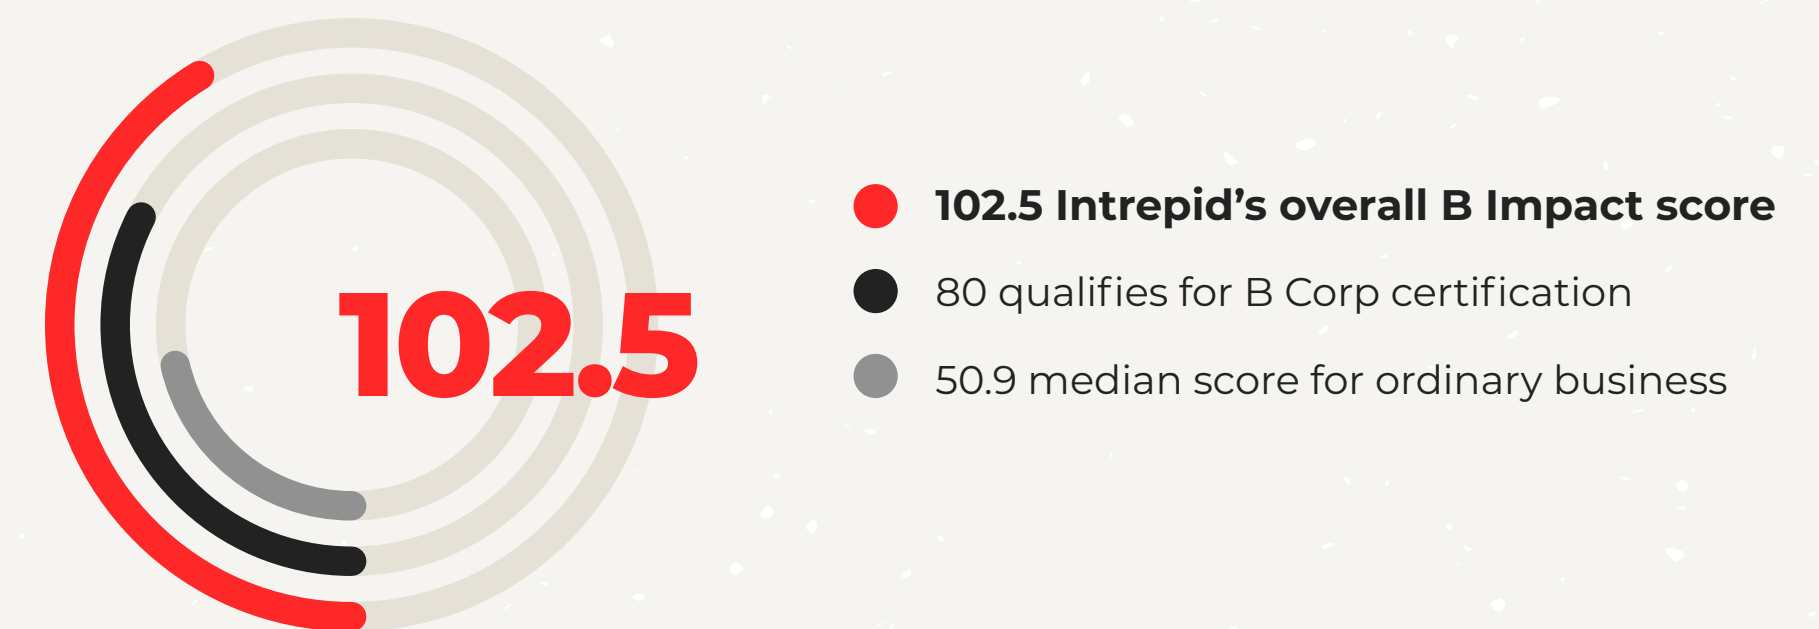

B Corp recertification

In June 2018, Intrepid became a certified B Corp. Certified B Corporations meet high standards of social and environmental performance, accountability and transparency.

B Corps must recertify every three years to maintain B Corp status. In 2021, we recertified, increasing our score by 10% and in 2024, we recertified again – increasing our score by more than 11 points, to 102.5. This certification shows our commitment to creating long-term value for all our stakeholders. This includes our workers, our customers, and the communities we operate in. Importantly, it provides us with a framework for continuous improvement and a benchmark against other responsible businesses around the world in all industries.

Our Australian business

Thousands of travellers explore Australia with us each year across 59 itineraries, including 46 Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander experiences. With the onboarding of our country office, we have staff all over the country working with local operators to ensure that we consistently deliver high standards of quality and safety on our trips.

We have built strong relationships with a range of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander tour operators, including Island Stars Cultural Experience on Thursday Island, 100% Finke River Adventures and Kingfisher Tours in the Northern Territory, Koomal Dreaming in Western Australia, Dreamtime Southern Cross on Gadigal land in Sydney and Mossman Gorge Cultural Centre in Queensland. Across 2023 and 2024, we have worked with more than 50 Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander-owned experience providers and provided over 5,000 passengers with a First Nations experience. We have engaged 12 First Nations content creators, hired 3 First Nations caterers and worked with 15 First Nations consultants, technology companies and educators. We provide cultural and protocol training, Acknowledgement of Country training and on-country visits for our staff.

We'll continue to nurture our partnerships with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities and businesses to inform our understanding of Country and culture and build appreciation and respect for the world's oldest living culture in our travellers.

Our values

In 2024, we launched our new company values. These underpin our approach to reconciliation and guide the actions in this plan.

Real

We are real.

We don't try to be something we're not. We're authentic to ourselves and each other. This is reflected in everything we do, including the way we run trips with real experiences at our core. We show up in a true and transparent way. We lead with an openness to learn more and see the world in a different way.

Ambitious

We are ambitious.

We're determined to build the best travel company for the world. This drives us to continuously try new things, adapt and grow – both as a business and as individuals. We're not afraid to go first or take risks, even if that means learning difficult lessons along the way. At Intrepid, we're all about setting – and achieving – ambitious goals.

Impactful

We are impactful.

We do the work that makes us proud. We recognise that the decisions we make and actions we take have the power to create lasting change for our team, our travellers, the places we visit and the communities we meet. That's why, in everything we do, we're guided by the question – what kind of positive impact will this create?

Together

We are together.

Our success is built on a foundation of togetherness. We believe that our collective success is more important than our individual achievements. Our trips bring people together from all over the world to discover new places and experience new things. We embrace community and connection and see diversity as one of our greatest strengths and opportunities.

Our journey towards a Stretch RAP

At Intrepid, we aspire to be the best travel company not only in the world but for the world. As an Australian-owned business with curious customers and significant First Nations product included in our trips around the world, we understand the importance of a Reconciliation Action Plan (RAP) in advancing and measuring our reconciliation efforts. While the RAP serves as a standalone document, reconciliation is deeply embedded in Intrepid's culture and daily operations. It's not treated as a separate initiative but as a perspective through which we view our entire business.

We began our RAP journey by launching our Reflect RAP in February 2019. This first RAP allowed us to identify steps to strengthen our partnerships with First Nations operators, enrich trip itineraries with cultural experiences, and better educate travellers about First Nations' cultures.

We also recognised gaps in our employment practices, such as the need for cultural safety, tailored recruitment approaches, and cultural leave policies. Guided by a First Nations human resources consultant, we've made strides in updating policies and embedding cultural safety into our workplace. However, we understand the importance of taking measured steps and regularly checking in to ensure our progress is meaningful.

This Stretch RAP builds on our learnings and the foundations laid by our earlier RAPs, setting us on a path toward deeper, more impactful reconciliation.

A Stretch RAP challenges us to think bigger and act bolder in defining what reconciliation means – for our business, for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples, and for Australia. It encourages us to seek innovative ways to collaborate with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, holds us accountable to our commitments and ensures we deliver on these promises for our staff, partners, and suppliers.

Reconciliation: A collective responsibility

Intrepid’s mission is to create positive change through the joy of travel. To drive positive change for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples, reconciliation must be a collective effort. This includes building respectful relationships, valuing culture, creating and sharing opportunities, and amplifying truths that need to be heard and understood.

Through the implementation of our previous two RAPs, we learned the value of collaboration in achieving these goals. For example, increasing our spending with First Nations businesses required cross-departmental efforts – from our product team onboarding Aboriginal cultural experiences to our marketing and partnerships teams contracting First Nations content creators. Engaging First Nations advisors also proved vital in reviewing and shaping our policies.

This shared responsibility extends across all areas of the business, which is why our Reconciliation Working Group includes mid-level and senior representatives from every department.

We are also fortunate to continue working with consultants Trish Adjei and Bart Pigram, whose expertise has been instrumental in shaping our RAP.

Trish is a Wuthathi and Mabuiag Islander woman who brings extensive experience in advocacy, intellectual property and First Nations arts and culture. She played a critical role in developing Intrepid’s Indigenous Engagement Protocols and has provided valuable guidance on intellectual property protection.

Bart is a Yawuru man from Broome who owns Narlijia Experiences Broome, sharing the rich stories of his culture and Country. His insights into community perspectives have significantly influenced our approach, including our support for the Voice to Parliament.

Leadership and accountability

Internally, the RAP is championed by Intrepid’s Purpose team, with leadership support from the Managing Director of ANZ and the General Manager of Purpose. In 2022, we created a new role – Global Social Impact Manager – specifically to oversee reconciliation, human rights, and community impact.

The Stretch RAP is the result of collaboration across all levels of our business. It incorporates feedback from Reconciliation Australia, addressing key focus areas such as employment, truth-telling and anti-racism.

Key new initiatives for 2025 and beyond

- More formalised and diverse range of voices for input on decision-making. To reflect the diversity of the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities means that we need to draw on a broader range of input when we are making decisions.
- New guidelines developed for the business on important matters such as working with Traditional Owners when developing products in national parks; how to give a meaningful Acknowledgement of Country; adopting a truth-telling framework and guidelines for our trips; and a reference guide for our trips identifying Country, Traditional Custodians, language and any significant events in that area.
- New staff and partner engagement initiatives such as recognition of reconciliation champions and on Country familiarisation tours.
- Supplementary educational resources for customers such as protocol guidelines and videos.
- Philanthropic support for language preservation, Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander-owned and run social enterprises and sponsorship of Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander tourism business owners to attend industry learning events and mentoring.
- Improvements in our use of language via an audit of our web and itinerary content and First Nations led cultural copywriting training.
- A focus on truth-telling, using research and advocacy, to support Intrepid staff and the tourism industry to be confident to embrace truth as a core part of reconciliation.
- A consolidated effort to significantly improve recruitment, retention, and professional development of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander staff and tour leaders.
- Explore the opportunities to include a fully Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander-owned expedition-style multiday itinerary.

Highlights from our Reflect RAP

Building cultural awareness and engagement with our staff

- Ninety staff members participated in Cultural Competency workshops facilitated by the Koorie Heritage Trust.
- An Acknowledgement of Country was added to Intrepid's brand sites and a Welcome to Country was included in key company events.
- Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander flags, language maps, and an Acknowledgement of Country plaque displayed prominently in Intrepid's Head Office.
- More than 70 Melbourne-based staff attended film screenings and NAIDOC events in July, Ngamai meetups with Aboriginal business owners (through Kalinya Communications) and a film screening of The Final Quarter.
- 35 staff participated in Koorie Heritage Trust cultural education walks. During our annual company Global Summit, our top 20 trip leaders from around the world took part in these walks as well.

Creating culturally appropriate and respectful travel itineraries

- Removed alcohol from our sunset tours at Uluru.
- Added two new trip experiences led by Aboriginal guides in the Daintree National Park in Queensland and included a First Nations contemporary art class.

Supporting First Nations businesses

- Intrepid sponsored the #Ngamai Challenge, inviting First Nations entrepreneurs to pitch how they could grow their business globally. First Nations entrepreneur and Muthi and Gunditjmara woman Mikaela Egan won an Intrepid trip to Kenya to meet with local business owners and community-based tourism projects.

Our Innovate RAP

Intrepid’s Innovate Reconciliation Action Plan, launched in 2020, expanded on the learnings from the Reflect RAP, continuing to explore opportunities within our trip itineraries and supply chain, building new partnerships and ways of working with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities and raising awareness of our RAP actions among our staff.

It coincided with a time of great social, political and environmental change in Australia, which meant both opportunities and challenges for implementation.

We launched during the Covid-19 pandemic, which effectively shut down tourism for two years. Travel restrictions eased and borders reopened in 2022, but the industry took a long time to recover and many businesses pivoted out of tourism or did not survive.

There was also political change, with a new Government marking their opening address in June 2022 with a commitment to the Uluru Statement from the Heart and the subsequent, and ultimately unsuccessful, Voice to Parliament referendum in October 2023, which created some hostile media rhetoric around reconciliation.

The tourism sector also experienced a change in its approach to engagement with First Nations' tourism at this time, with more travel companies and entities engaged in reconciliation. Companies such as Flight Centre, AirBnB Australia, Virgin Australia and Expedia Group joined the tourism Reconciliation Industry Networking Group (RING). Austrade released its 2030 THRIVE Re-imagining the Visitor Economy Strategy, which aims to grow unique and high-quality products, including Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander experiences, alongside state investments in Indigenous tourism, such as in Queensland.

At Intrepid, we continued to align our impact with our core business of developing and delivering sustainable, experience-rich travel. Our engagement in First Nations tourism aligns with our mission to create positive change through the joy of travel. Despite the challenges of rebuilding our business following the pandemic, we continued our commitment to reconciliation by supporting the completion of the Innovate RAP activities via staff involvement and strategic resource allocation.

Highlights from our Innovate RAP

Opportunities

- Worked with 58 First Nations operators and other suppliers.
- Spent over $550,000 with First Nations suppliers in the FY23 (10% increase on FY22).
- Co-presented the First Nations Tourism Mentoring Programme, which has more than 100 businesses enrolled.
- Gold Sponsor of Native Nations, a cross-cultural program with Aotearoa New Zealand, to immerse Aboriginal and Māori young people in a tourism programme to reinvigorate pride in their culture and set up opportunities through tourism and community.
- Sponsored the World Indigenous Tourism Summit in February 2023, held in Boorloo/ Perth, home of the Whadjuk Nyoongar people, which was coordinated and hosted by WAITOC (Western Australian Indigenous Tourism Operators Council). This included sponsoring a First Nations delegate to attend the conference.
- Worked with NIDA to appoint an Intern at our Daintree Ecolodge and funded a scholarship for a place in the Tourism course for an Indigenous student at William Angliss College.

Respect

- Reviewed HR and recruitment procedures and policies with Dhiira Consulting to remove barriers to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander participation in our workplace.
- Created protocol guidelines for staff and customers as well as a Cultural Learning Strategy for staff at all levels of the learning journey and updated our Australia Style Guide – the guidelines Intrepid follows when designing or reviewing trips – with guidance on First Nations experiences.
- Staff cultural training given at separate times by Uncle Bill Nicholson Jnr from the Wurundjeri Woi Wurrung Corporation; Bwgcolman Ewamian woman Ash Bartley from Ash Bartley Consulting; Wuthathi, Mabuia and Ghanaian woman Trish Adjei; our RAP advisor and Ballardong and Whadjuk woman Rohanna Edwards from PwC Indigenous Consulting (now Yamagigu Consulting).
- Operations team completed the QTIC (Queensland Tourism Industry Council) ‘Respecting First Nations Protocols’ training in 2023.
- Facilitated 40 of our Head Office staff to go on Country with follow-up yarning circles to Taungurung Country and Dja Dja Wurrung Country to meet and learn from Elders for the day.
- Ran five ‘Lunch and Learn’ sessions for all staff related to the Voice to Parliament referendum.
- Ran two Acknowledgement of Country training sessions.
- All trip leaders are now provided cultural training during their induction.
- We were a vocal and financial supporter of the Voice to Parliament Yes23 campaign, after an extensive consultation with our First Nations Partners (advisors, product owners, communities, industry partners). We conducted industry and staff information sessions, led discussions with other B Corporations and encouraged our staff to volunteer.

Relationships

- The Intrepid Foundation partnered with Country Needs People, providing funding for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander ranger and land management programs.
- Intrepid and Tourism Australia created a Reconciliation Industry Networking Group for Tourism (RING), inviting all Australian tourism businesses with a RAP to join. Currently, there are more than 20 organisations that meet regularly and bring in specialists to advise on topics such as recruitment and culturally safe workspaces, mentoring and training, and industry issues like product development.
- Intrepid committed to long-term relationships with Aboriginal artist and Goreng Goreng woman, Rachael Sarra as an Intrepid ambassador and short-term sponsorship of community football club Richmond for the NAIDOC round.

Governance

- Implemented the Weavr software to manage RAP and other First Nations actions.
- Created the new role of Social Impact Manager in our Purpose team to manage our reconciliation efforts and make sure that all teams are delivering on the RAP commitments.

When sitting down to write this I anticipated I would spend an hour or so over the weekend doing it, but instead I spent the majority of my Sunday researching and learning. It was a humbling experience to realise how little I knew about the history of a land I had always just assumed I knew so well. The experience was even more powerful by having returned to my family home this past year and appreciating again the powerful connection you can feel with the place of your birth. A connection that never leaves no matter how far you may have wandered around the globe.

One Intrepid team member explains how the act of writing an Acknowledgement of Country fostered her cultural awareness of First Nations history.

Innovate RAP

Key learnings, challenges, achievements and disappointments

Learning

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander opinions are not homogeneous, requiring wide consultation to capture the breadth of opinion and experience across Australia, from grassroots communities, regional areas and metropolitan cities.

Challenge

Preparing the business for the recruitment and employment challenges and getting the right people engaged to overcome them.

Achievement

The fourfold increase of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander-owned experiences on our trips. The best economic impact we can have is to engage First Nations businesses so they can benefit. And the best way to overcome negative opinions or inexperience of people is to take them out on Country.

Disappointment

The result of the Voice to Parliament referendum. While it doesn't directly impact our business, we remain deeply committed to supporting the other pillars of the Uluru Statement from the Heart.

Developing the Stretch RAP

As we commence the process to extend our commitment to reconciliation beyond the Innovate stage, we have honestly reflected on where we are at in our work towards reconciliation using our performance against the Innovate RAP goals, feedback from staff, customers and Reconciliation Australia and input from Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander advisors.

In our annual staff survey, 95% of Intrepid staff feel that Intrepid's commitment to purpose initiatives is genuine. In other words, we are delivering on expectations around purpose actions, of which reconciliation is one. We are aware of the importance of cultural engagement to our stakeholders. In a materiality study of environmental, social and governance issues to staff, customers, suppliers and partners in late 2023 found that:

- 94% of staff said that Cultural Connection and Education was important or very important
- Protection of cultural heritage was the number one issue for Intrepid's external stakeholders

However, there are gaps that this Stretch RAP needs to address. The feedback from Reconciliation Australia identified that Intrepid needs to further address the issues of truth-telling, anti-racism and closing the gap indicators that the business can address.

Issues to address

Truth-telling

Intrepid has a unique opportunity to pass on the truth of Australia's history to customers through storytelling on trips on Country. This requires educating and upskilling our leaders to know the Country they are on and the history of that area, done in conjunction with Traditional Custodians. In addition, we have 319 staff and more than 50 leaders in Australia who will be educated in how to acknowledge Country, beyond the script. Each staff member will be trained to deliver their own Acknowledgement of Country. In addition, we will update all website trip notes in Australia to ensure that our copywriters and content developers write culturally appropriate and factual content.

Employment

The area that Intrepid can impact on the most is employment. In 2023, Intrepid had one staff member and one trip leader who identified as Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander. Intrepid does not currently have any staff or trip leaders on our leader roster who identify as Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander. We recognise this is an important missing element as we aim to have First Nations staff and tour guides leading on their own country. The work we did in 2023 on policy, our efforts to build a culturally safe space and our plans for internships and education sponsorships have paved the way for the employment of First Nations staff. However, we have identified challenges with recruiting First Nations tour guides. These include the seasonal nature of guiding work, the use of third parties for some trips in Australia, and our requirement for leaders to have some guiding experience. As the structure of our business changes, with our own Destination Management Company in place in Australia and less reliance on third parties, we're confident of the opportunity to recruit and train new leaders and we hope this will support more First Nations people to pursue a career in tourism.

Anti-racism

In 2024, Intrepid continued revamping our Global Diversity foundations, including policy reviews and the appointment of a Diversity Project Lead in June 2024. As part of the commitment to reconciliation, we will continue to ensure these policies are fit for purpose in Australia, with the input of our advisors, to address Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people's specific experiences, as well as create pathways to reporting and resolution that are culturally appropriate. We know the transformational power of getting out on Country and meeting and building relationships with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people. From anecdotes and customer quotes, the ability to build bridges through personal contact has so far proven to be one of the best resources we have for addressing racism. We will use this to our advantage with increased Indigenous product on our Australian trips for customers and increased opportunities for staff and industry partners to get out on Country. Another area where we made progress in 2024 was in addressing potential racism on trips towards Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander customers. We hosted a group of First Nations customers and joined them on tour to explore this topic with them firsthand.

Customer education

In addition to upskilling our trip leaders, we are in a fortunate position to further influence respectful learning and conversations with customers, both domestic and international, through connections with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people as well as supplementary resources around protocols, truth-telling and foundation knowledge such as what Country they are on for all trips, and basic greetings in language.

Case studies

In developing this RAP, Intrepid also reviewed the plans of respected organisations such as the Cancer Council, University of Newcastle, Voyages, Tourism Australia and Social Ventures. Listening and learning from others on this path means we can work towards bigger goals collaboratively.

Intrepid sought counsel from our RAP advisors and another First Nations partner with tourism experience – getting different perspectives from Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people who know our business, know our goals and our capabilities, but also have lived and professional experience of the barriers and opportunities of reconciliation.

Across the business, we are looking forward to delivering on our Stretch RAP commitments. The goals are big, but we believe we have the resources and the enthusiasm to drive reconciliation forward in a meaningful way.

Changing the way we all see the world, one trip at a time.

In 2022, our trip leader, Leonie, shared an experience from a trip she led in South Australia that has set it apart from the rest.

The trip started off like any other, but during the second night's dinner, she was challenged to a difficult conversation. One of the travellers started talking about 'Australian history' and then launched into a racist tirade. 'Australians' should stop apologising to 'Aboriginal people'. According to him, they had 'apologised over and over again' and he was 'suffering every day' for being told that he 'had to feel guilty'. As a 'sixth-generation Australian' he believed that the first fleet was 'the best thing to ever happen to this country'. The customer continued with racist remarks throughout the trip, with Leonie correcting bias with facts whenever she could.

During the trip's final activity, a wine tasting, the group were happily chatting and Leonie asked them if they could list their favourite things they have done and seen on the trip. This is when the customer from the earlier discussion addressed the group. He said that his favourite experience had actually been the stay on Adnyamathanha Country with our Aboriginal hosts. He said it was amazing to see how the Flinders Ranges are home to this group and how much respect they had for the land. He followed up by saying:

'I have come to realise, that I have been very disrespectful of Aboriginal people. I had just never met one before in my life until now. Terrence was such a nice man. This whole experience has been life-changing for me and it has changed the way I see things.'

Leonie said 'I nearly teared up. If this isn't what it's all about, then what is? We all commended him on his self-reflection and I had the biggest, genuine smile on my face for the rest of the afternoon. I'll gladly live through more exhausting and uncomfortable days if it creates one more person with a broader worldview. One at a time, we can keep going forward.'

Seeing the power of travel in action to address racism, share truth and increase knowledge is heartwarming. Intrepid's commitment to elevating and showcasing our First Nations suppliers creates so much opportunity for Australians to learn about Australia's First Nations peoples, place and history. Intrepid has a unique role in helping to shift and shape attitudes by sharing these experiences.'

RELATIONSHIPS

Building relationships to promote reconciliation

Intrepid is deeply committed to building strong, respectful relationships, recognising that nurturing connections with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples and communities is essential to meaningful engagement as part of our reconciliation journey.

The Stretch RAP is a powerful opportunity to bring Sustainable Experience-Rich Travel (SERTs) to our customers, ensuring that our trips celebrate diversity and inclusivity and deliver benefits to the communities that we visit. We hope the experiences, learnings and insights gained from developing our RAP in Australia will enrich our relationships with Traditional Owners around the world.

To foster these important relationships, Intrepid commits to:

- Acknowledge the broad range of lived experiences of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Island peoples and listen and learn with an open mind.

- Strengthening our current connections with existing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander partners and operators, ensuring these relationships continue to thrive and grow.

- Building and nurturing partnerships with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander organisations to create new areas of collaboration between Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities and Intrepid staff, customers and partners.

Through these commitments, we aim to create a journey of shared understanding, respect, mutual benefit and positive impact.
